

The Life of a Savage

The problem with having "feelings" is that people with them will do everything in their power to spread love, create joy, relieve pain and plant hope, while those without "feelings" will do everything to destroy love, joy, invoke pain, and crush hope with no remorse.

You can't always help who you develop feelings for and you have no control over who may or may not have feelings for you. It's a known unknown that originates from an unknown unknown because let's face it, you can't predict what you will feel or won't feel, nor the outcome of those feelings, or lack thereof.

This is why some remain silent in fear of the unknown, or even in fear of knowing what is given will never be reciprocated. Fear that fate has been written and cannot be altered.

Love awakened only with the intention to be used up and once nothing is left, be forced to return to a night of sleep deeper than the sleep it awakened from. A never-ending cycle.

Feelings are a weakness. Emotions in general are weaknesses that the strong feast upon. It's like swimming in an ocean of sharks with a wound that just bleeds in the water, tempting an animal that can sense nothing but a meal and has the instinct to eat and will eat that meal in its entirety.

Do you think a shark would resist food? Do you think the strong don't prey on the weak? You are mistaken. It is a natural instinct. So in order to remain at the top of the food chain, in order to survive, find an immediate anecdote for those feelings that you caught as soon as the first symptom appears. It is an infection. The quicker you cure it, the better your chances of survival.

Welcome to the life of a savage...

Written by,

Destini Taylor